Election Finally Over

John Red Eagle was elected Principle Chief of the Osage Nation and Scott Bighorse won the Assistant Principle Chief office.

Finally this long and drawn out election is over and the mending of fences can begin. Congressman Supernaw sent his Notes to the Nation out last night with the results which I will attach to this newsletter. Congressman Supernaw states in his notes: "These new leaders have just been handed some of the biggest problems our Nation has ever faced."

Now is the time for all to set differences aside and seek God's grace and healing for not only external differences but internal tribal differences. Allow the healing process to begin by praying for our new leaders, our congress and our minerals council.

Today is a day of celebration for the Osage Nation. Each of us must do our part to move this process toward security, dignity and success. We can do this by supporting and encouraging John and Scott. No doubt those keeping up with government affairs are fully aware of the tasks that lay ahead for these two men.

A news article from the Tulsa World is attached regarding the extension of the Appeal on the Reservation case. Those of you who are not on the Osage Nation Pre-Election News mailing list should send an e-mail to: osagenews@comcast.net and request to be added to this mailing list. A lot of updates regarding government affairs are provided from this source.

Congressmen Supernaw and Red Corn both write newsletters to the citizenry. If you wish to be added to their mailing lists, write to the following: supernaw@flash.net redcorn@gmail.net .

As I have mentioned in the last few newsletters or reports, I must move on at some point. Today is my day to move on. The work I have done has been my reward and I have enjoyed it immensely. Even so, many hours have been dedicated to the cause of which I must now dedicate to a self sustaining endeavor.

Tomorrow, I'll be a reader and not a writer.
